Having been advised of the criminal liability for making false declarations and of the provisions of Art. 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the witness testified as follows:

Beginning in 1941, I worked for three years as a coachman. Living in the neighborhood, in Dziesiąta, I was required to bring different types of building materials. I often saw Muhsfeldt, the crematorium chief. He was a stout criminal with a dreary look and the features of a bandit. I often saw him torment prisoners. He beat them with a whip and wheels. Once, I saw him near the crematorium with a gun in his hand. After he got inside, I heard the shouts and groans of the people whom he was murdering. He was friends with the camp commandant Thumann – a man who [illegible] set dogs on people and who beat and tortured prisoners in a way which is difficult to describe. Of average height and dark complexion, he was more than 30 years of age. I would recognize him anytime. In this photograph I recognize Muhsfeldt – he doesn't look well now. Formerly, he was stout, with full face. In the photograph I recognize Muhsfeldt.

The report was read out.
